

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am extremely concerned about global warming and its probable effects on the planet and all its inhabitants.

I understand that the EU is very unhappy about our failure to cut our greenhouse gas emissions. I am also horrified to hear that the energy Green Paper does not contain specific targets for cuts in greenhouse gas emissions. In fact, rather than reducing emissions, I am led to believe that for the foreseeable future Ireland's emissions will continue to increase. This is unsustainable and betrays future generations.

I strongly urge you to rethink the proposals in the Green Paper and make a major effort to achieve large cuts in our emissions. I suggest a goal of at least 50% by 2050. Anything less will fail to stabilize the situation we now find ourselves in.

Yours,

Erica Algeo
